CONQUERING Colombia

An aerial view of Bogotá, Colombia, shows the grand sweep of the city. Inset, brightly dressed Afro-Colombian fruit sellers add color to a street scene.

The country's cultural attractions, art and cuisine will take your breath away

Story and photographs by Julie L. Kessler
Special to the Star-Advertiser

COMING OF AGE in the mid-'80s, rightly news emanating from Colombia made it an unlikely travel destination, given the perilous narcotics trade and drug warlords' full protection. In the years since 1993, when "King of Cocaine" Pablo Escobar was killed, things have certainly changed. It's true that the Revolutionary Armed Forces remain an enormous domestic problem. In the provinces, indigenous people are forcibly removed from their land without compensation, causing a displacement to cities ill-equipped to handle mass relocation. Nevertheless, Colombia, with its rich cultural history, excellent cuisine, hip art scene, incredible museums, natural beauty and overwhelmingly kind and hospitable people, make it a memorable and affordable destination with something for everyone.

My travel partner George and I landed in Bogotá at noon, and following a 15-minute cab ride, we arrived at La Candelaria, Bogotá's historic center — where the vast majority of sights are — and checked into Hotel Augusta. It's a modern yet charming 10-story

TRAVEL

SUNDAY 3/8/15 >> HONOLULU STAR-ADVERTISER >> G7

The cable car to Cerro de Monserrate in Bogotá offers spectacular views and a workout even for the most physically fit.

Barstamante, an old hacienda with large rooms and a small refreshing pool, just outside the wall of the Centro Histórico (Old City). The Old City, enclosed by a massive stone wall, is the original Spanish settlement. The city was pillaged several times throughout history, including in 1598, by privateer Sir Francis Drake. In 1981, UNESCO named Cartagena a World Heritage Site. Cartagena also gained notoriety from the movie "Romancing the Stone." (The movie was actually filmed in Mexico.)

Part of the fun of the Old City is meandering about, getting lost, seeing churches, admiring colorful colonial architecture, and then stopping for a fresh-squeezed juice or ice-cream. Street names are rarely used; instead, you gain perspective by going from one main plaza (Bolívar, Santa Domingos, San Diego) to another.

We spent three days walking around pleasantly, rather getting lost in the Old City and nearby Getsemani, seeing several churches, the San Felipe Fort and Casa Museo Rafael Núñez, home of four-time Colombian President Rafael Núñez (who was born and died in Cartagena). Núñez also wrote several verses of Colombia's national anthem and its constitution. The museum is reflective of traditional 19th-century Cartagena architecture and contains numerous artifacts of a life politically lived.

IF YOU GO ... COLOMBIA

WHERE TO STAY:

In Bogotá, Hotel Augusta, Avenida Jiménez No. 4-77, Candelaria-Centro Histórico, 110010, Bogotá. Telephone: 011-57-1-283-3000. Junior suite including taxes and buffet breakfast, free Wi-Fi, $89 per night for two. For more information visit www.hotelaugusta.com.co.

In Cartagena, Casa Bustamante, Carrera 2, 42467, El Cabrero, Cartagena, Bolívar, 130002. Telephone: 011-57-5-643-7185. Large room with balcony including taxes, breakfast, free Wi-Fi, $131 per night for two. For more information visit www.casabustamante.com.co.

WHERE TO EAT:

Bogotá: El Sabor de Lupo, Avenida Jiménez No. 493, Candelaria (next to Hotel Augusta). Dinner for two including Pilsener beer, $21.

Restaurant Donde Martha, Calle del Divorcio 8-53, Candelaria (near Pasaje Riveros). Complete lunch for two including salad, marvelous homemade soup and fresh-squeezed juice, $8.

Restaurant Sanalejo, Avenida Jiménez No. 3-73, Candelaria. Telephone: 011-57-4-334-6171. Dinner for two, including wine, $50.

Sosquite:

Sol y Luna, middle of the town's only road. Full lunch (fresh fish, chicken or beef) including salad, marvelous homemade soup and fresh-squeezed juice, $7 for two.

Cartagena:

La Cevichena, Calle 39, No. 7-14 (at Calle Stuart), Plaza San Diego, Centro Histórico. Dinner of two large plates of fresh ceviche served with guacamele, corn tortillas and assorted garnishes, and mofitos, $46.

La Lucciola Restaurant and Bar, Corner of Calle 30 and Carrera 9, Getsemani (kitty corner to Cafe Havana). Excellent mofitos, just $3 between 5:30 and 8 p.m., $1 after, and delicious Italian-style, homemade pizzas and pastas. Dinner for two, $20.

La Mulata, Calle del Quero 58, Calle 3, Centro Histórico. Authentic Afro-Caribbean food in rooms filled with local art. $20 for two.

LEAVE AT HOME:

High heels, strappy sandals, rubber slippers and flashy jewelry. The historic areas of both Bogotá and Cartagena have grimey potholes every few feet, often the size of boot boxes. This requires you to constantly keep one eye down and one on the horizon. The cobblestones, streets and pathways are uneven, so comfortable, rubber-soled walking shoes are best.

There is also an enormous problem of motorcycle cover theft (for the copper's resale value), and six months ago a Colombian toddler fell into an uncovered manhole and was swept away and died. The government has started replacing copper manhole covers with plastic ones.

DON'T FORGET:

Bogotá is near the equator and is at high elevation. The weather can have a 20- to 25-degree differential between day and evening, thus layering is key. There are often afternoon showers, so take a travel umbrella.

TO LEARN MORE:

Consulate General of Colombia, 8383 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 420, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. Tel. 323-463-4229.

It's easy to get lost wandering around Cartagena's old town and nearby Getsemani, where street names are rarely used. A dominant sight is San Felipe Fort, left, built by the Spanish colony powers in 1536 to defend the city from enemies approaching by land or sea.
